Japan is well known for its extensive and punctual transportation networks, in particular its trains. One prominent private railway company in the Kanto region is the Odakyu Group. Founded on June 1st 1948 as the Odawara Express Railway Company, it has grown to now include 100 group companies, encompassing industries such as transportation, real estate, retail, hotels, personal storage, fiber optic cables and recreational sites. The group currently employs 3,637 people and is headquartered in Shinjuku.

The company has largely structured its business around their rail and transportation lines to take advantage of these passengers. One example of this is opening their department stores near major stations on their train network such as Shinjuku, Machida and Fujisawa. They also run a chain of supermarkets named Odakyu OX, which are located near Odakyu stations in west Tokyo and across Kanagawa Prefecture. In this way the Odakyu group has achieved great synergy across its various business sectors.

This strategy has also been utilized to promote their hotel, bus and recreational services. The Odakyu Group operates a number of hotels, notably the Hyatt Regency in Shinjuku and resorts in the Izu Peninsular. In potential future developments, Odakyu Group started negotiations with 7&i Holdings in 2018 to possibly open 7-11 stores in Odakyu train stations, and use the 7&i brand range in their supermarkets.

TRANSCRIPT 2

The Odakyu train network is a major railway that serves commuters coming from various bedroom communities in Kanagawa. Despite having such vital commuter lines, Odakyu is probably best known for its leisure travel, specifically the Romance Car. As Kanagawa is such a popular destination for tourists, Odakyu created a fleet of 'Romance Car' luxury express trains that travel to the beach area of Katase-Enoshima and mountain area of Hakone-Yumoto. These cars only have reserved seats, and can make the trip from Shinjuku to Hakone-Yumoto in only 75 minutes.

They have a long history dating back to 1957 when the first Romance Car was used. This model set the world record for the fastest narrow gauge trains with a top speed of 145km\hour. This model also served as the inspiration for developing the first class of high speed rail or 'Shinkansen.'

The Romance Cars have continued to develop over time, with newer models being even more innovative and having a wider variety of designs and interiors. There have been a total of 9 different models of the Romance Car over its history with the newest model being released in March 2018. The new model is called the Odakyu 70000 series GSE. In tribute to the history of the Romance car line, the 70000 series is the same color as the original line of Odakyu trains. There are now six models of the Romance Car currently in active service.
